

MEMPHIS BLUES WHISKEY & TEQUILA

The world of whiskey is amazing journey of flavor, barrel ageing, sourced whiskey, folklore & great marketing. Our hope with this collection of mainly American Whiskey is for you to enjoy our world-class BBQ with a great drink in hand. Years of hard work and collecting have gone into this list. Overwhelmed, don't sweat it – ask questions, try something new, and trust your palate.

A few things for you if you're new to the American Whiskey world:

1. Drink what you like. Don't let whiskey snobs and online forums guide what you drink. The most expensive whiskey isn't necessarily the best.
2. Whiskey isn't always bourbon. To be called Bourbon, the whiskey must be at least 51% corn and aged in new charred oak barrels – that's mainly all you need to know...for now.
3. Learn your mash bills so that you understand why you like what you like. Grains other than corn make a huge difference. High rye give the whiskey a lot of spice and nuttiness. Wheat makes for a smoother sipper, and possibly more age-worthy too. All corn? Super buttery and drinkable. Other grains like brown rice and barley can also add complexity.
4. Proof is important. High proof means higher alcohol content, but also bigger, bolder flavours and sometimes a whiskey that truly tastes as it should.

Buffalo Trace Collection

Buffalo Trace Distillery has historically been known by several names, including the George T. Stagg Distillery and the Old Fashioned Copper (O.F.C.) Distillery. Its namesake bourbon brand, Buffalo Trace Kentucky Straight Bourbon whiskey, was introduced in August 1999. The company claims the distillery is the oldest continuously-operating distillery in the United States.

Up until very recently, mainly 'sourced' whiskey, but with the building of their distillery in 2015, now some of their own product is coming online. Some great pours and unique finishes and blending, particularly with the Blood Oath line.

Rabbit Hole

Started by clinical psychologist Kaveh Zamarian who fell in love with a woman from Louisville, Kentucky and went down the "rabbit hole" of building his own spirits brand. Unique mashbills. Both whiskeys we have are wheated - the Dareringer is aged in PX Sherry Casks and is one of my top picks of 2022.

Old Forester

First bottled in 1870, it is considered the longest continuously produced bourbon in the US. During prohibition, founder George Garvin Brown had one of the few licenses authorizing lawful production. Mash bill of 72% corn, 18% rye and 10% malted barley. Owned by the Brown-Forman Company that also owns Jack Daniels.

Michter's

Only the finest ingredients & equipment craft this truly small batch whiskey – supposedly about 20 barrels per batch. All the ryes and whiskeys are started at a lower proof in barrel making for a richer, smoother flavor. Heat cycling, toasting barrels, and the depth of female palates make for a truly world-class pour.

One of my personal favourites and the biggest brand on my shelves at home.
If I had one last drink EVER, it would be Michter's.

OTHER POURS FROM KENTUCKY

Angel's Envy Angel's Envy 16 Angel's Envy "Caribbean Rum Cask" Finish Rye 26

From the Louisville Distilling Company (a subsidiary of Bacardi). Angel's Envy is a small batch, roughly 6 year old bourbon finished in port barrels for 3 - 6 months.

Hirsch 'The Horizon' Straight Bourbon Whiskey 18

This is a tough one. A California company bottling Indiana bourbon in Kentucky, but it's so darn tasty we put it here with the rest of Kentucky. High rye mash bill but sweet and smooth as silk.

Jefferson's

Jefferson's 'Very Small Batch' 15 Jefferson's 'Ocean Aged at Sea' Voyage #17 28

Jefferson's 'Ocean Aged at Sea' Voyage #12 28

The Kentucky Artisan Distillery (owned by Pernod Ricard) is responsible for these tasty treats. In 2012, Master Distiller Trey Zoeller partnered with the OCEARCH foundation to test out what would happen to whiskey aged at sea. The answer is spectacular. The constant movement and extreme temperature variations result in a unique and complex pour.

Kentucky Owl The Wiseman by Kentucky Owl 16 Kentucky Owl 'Confiscated' 25

Brought back to life in 2014 by Dixon Dedman, whose grandfather started the brand in 1879. Resurrected from an old family recipe. While the 'Confiscated' is on the pricy side for a mainly 'sourced' whiskey, the 'Wiseman' is a killer blend of 4 year old wheat & high rye bourbon (from Kentucky Owl) with some 5 - 8 year sourced bourbons.

Yellowstone 'Select' 18

Undisclosed distillery and mashbill (for current bottlings), but Beam family ties founded Limestone Brand Distillery in 2015 to bring this 'old' brand back.

Bulleit

Bulleit 8 Bulleit 'Barrel Strength' Batch No.5 18

Bulleit 10YR 10 Bulleit 'Barrel Strength' Batch No.7 18

Owned by Diageo, this high-rye content bourbon follows the century old mash bill of Augustus Bulleit originally made in 1830 - 68% corn, 28% rye and 4% malted barley. Lots of drama with this family but great value pours, especially the 10YR.

Corner Creek 'Reserve' 13

Sourced Whiskey from undisclosed distillery. Elusive information on this smooth and complex bottle.

Duke 'Small Batch' 14

From Ethan Wayne, John Wayne's youngest son. Sourced whiskey, strongly linked to the Wild Turkey distilling team of Jimmy & Eddy Russel. 75% corn, 13% rye and 12%barley.

Four Roses Four Roses 9 Four Roses 'Small Batch' 17

One of our absolute favourites, but little to nothing comes to BC. Known for it's 20 different recipes (mash bills), then expertly blending to suit. All 10 for Four Roses Bourbon and 4 are hand-selected to make their small batch.

Orphan Barrel Whiskey Co./George Dickel Distillery

Orphan Barrel distillery was organized in 2013 by Diageo for commercializing a large stock of ultra-aged American Whiskey at the Stitzel-Weller distillery in Kentucky. Supposed rare whiskeys “found” hidden away and nearly forgotten in the dark corners of distilleries and rickhouses. Fact or fiction we're not sure, but it's hard to argue about how tasty these are.
